Adjustable Cow Yoke.

Here is a cow yoke that will fit either a cow or calf, as it is adjustable, writes F. E. Howe in the Farm and Fireside. I made mine from discarded buggy tires and after trying several of these yokes I have used the most comfortable I have used.

This yoke is made of light and will prevent a cow or calf from creeping through fences. The sketch shows the construction.

To make the cow yoke fit a calf remove the bolts, slide the parts along so the opening is smaller and replace the bolts in the proper holes. Have the tops and bottoms of the yokes bent forward to prevent the cows bumping their knees on them.

Sometimes the yoke may be apparently tight, but if a cow catches it on some brush she may turn it the other side up. That is the reason for having the top as well as the bottom bent forward so the ends are interchangeable.

SOME HORSE SENSE.

Unless the farm horses have a chance for proper rest at night they soon become weak and lose weight.

A jaded team can never do a profitable day's work.

During the hot months the work horses should spend the nights in the pasture near the stable.

Before they are released at night they should have eaten their regular ration and been cleaned and brushed from head to heels.

Anything that adds to the comfort of the work team and helps to keep it in condition puts cash in the owner's pocket and adds credit to his account.

Many horses are made quite nervous by any unusual noise or confusion about the barn, and this affects their eating. Food will not digest so well. Try to have everything as quiet and regular as usual at mealtime.

The horse has a small stomach. To keep it stuffed all the time is bad in every way. Feed a good fair ration three times a day and so prevent indigestion.

Fair Enough.

"You are the fourth tramp who has come here begging today," said the lady of the house, "and I'm all out of patience."

"I'm all out of vittles myself," replied the tramp. "Couldn't we make a trade?"—Exchange.

Handicapped.

"My dear, our automobile looks so cheap beside the one our neighbors have. We ought to get the latest make."

"I know we ought, but this is the only house I have to mortgage."—Baltimore American.

Sweet Voiced Frogs.

In Japan there is a kind of frog very celebrated for his sweet voice. He is called kajiki, and people pay as much as $10 for a pair of these marsh musicians. A poet in Japan keeps scores of singing frogs at his home, and he sometimes gives a party to his friends, when, after listening to the music, every guest is asked to write a poem in honor of the frogs.

Asafetida.

Sheep have a fit of joy eating the young asafetida plant, and Persians and other oriental races relish it as much as sheep. The juice of the asafetida plant when fresh is so strong that a teaspoonful turns out more smell in a house than a hundredweight of drug store asafetida.
